2. COURSE DESCRIPTION
2.1. Course objectives	In the second half of the 19th century, as a reaction to various currents of modern European thought, even anti-religious, began the renewal of medieval scholastic thought, especially that of Thomas Aquinas, which will receive its support and additional impetus with the encyclical of Leo XIII. under the title Aeterni Patris (1879). Among the church philosophers themselves, there was an attempt to connect scholastic philosophy with the foundations of modern philosophy. Later Croatian philosophers (Stadler, Bauer, Zimmermann and many others) encountered this idea in their studies abroad. On their return to their homeland, as professors and public cultural workers, they began a fruitful writing activity, creating also Croatian philosophical terminology. They divulged their thoughts in the domestic periodicals they founded (Hrvatska straža, Bogoslovska smotra, Život – Obnovljeni Život, Nova revija, Duhovni život). The aim of the course is thus to acquaint students with the neo-scholastic philosophy in the European context and its croatian representatives and their work in the Croatian national corpus.
2.2. Enrolment requirements and/or entry competences required for the course	Enrollment in the second year of graduate study.
2.3. Learning outcomes at the level of the programme to which the course contributes	The course will enable the student to: critically consider the influences of religion on the social life, science and culture of various peoples; analyze the relationship of religious sciences with other disciplines (philosophy, literature); reflect on and discuss (contemporary) cultural phenomena and values, based on knowledge and theories in philosophical heritage and other disciplines.
2.4. Expected learning outcomes at the level of the course (3 to 10 learning outcomes)	After successfully passing the course, students will be able to list the central metaphysical strongholds on which Croatian Neo-Scholasticism or Thomism is based; list the Croatian neotomists of that period and their main works as well as the periodicals which spread their thought; explain the contribution of the mentioned philosophers to the Croatian national philosophy and the struggle against the crushing ideologies of the 20th century.
